As every king does, King Vikramaditya also wandered in his kingdom in disguise to know about his citizens. He disguised himself as a robber one day and visited the usual hiding places of robbers. There he met four robbers who became very intimate to the king. They told him that they had been very unlucky for a long time. So the king suggested that he can guide them to the royal treasury where they would collect as much money as they want. So saying he took the comrades to the royal treasury and they collected as much as they wanted. They left the place and king returned to the palace. In spite of his help the comrades could not escape because the king had a very alert police force.

(From the stories of King Vikramaditya)
